

Private Boarding School

School Profile

South Kent is a boarding school for boys only, in grades 9-12 and postgraduate, located in the heart of the Litchfield Hills in northwestern Connecticut. It attracts students who are motivated and who demonstrate a potential for success. Rigorous academics are balanced by athletics, a strong arts program, extracurricular activities, and community service. Established in 1923, the campus is a quintessential New England setting, with wooden and stone buildings set amongst rolling hills, trees and ponds. An enrollment of 190 students and a teaching staff of 35 translate into small classes and individualized attention for students. The average class has ten students, enabling all students to receive the individual attention so critical during secondary educational development.
